Six Trends Shaping Global Tax

Full article first published in Thomson Reuters' International Taxes Weekly.

Philip R. West of Steptoe & Johnson LLP discussed six global tax trends at the Taxand Global Conference 2013 in New York on April 24. Unsurprisingly, the U.S. regime still remains an outlier.

Is a 'Harmonised' International Tax System Viable?

"The public debate around corporate tax payments is currently moving at an accelerated pace, permeating across an increasing number of major global jurisdictions. In the last week alone we have seen a more forthright defence from those corporates facing the most scrutiny, arguing the important point that it is governments themselves that set the tax rules and they are simply complying with the legislation. The issue has also risen up the agenda in the US, with questions focusing on Apple's vast offshore cash piles and the tax structures around them.
